The thing I see recurring, is exactly the thing that rings true with me.

If not for Glider, I would have quit WoW months ago.

Instead, I purchased 2 more accounts to bot with, and paid 4 months of service for each since then.

Proof of increased revenue due to botting.

A message from a dad...

Howdy folks...

I come with a story to share today, and ask that if you have a moment you say a quick prayer for my son.
A few years ago we found out that my son had cancer. He was so young and was always so happy. The therapy we had to go through made him pretty much a paraplegic. From that day until December of 2005 Tim had pretty much just watched TV and barely interacted with anyone except his mother and I. On the 23rd of December 2005 his mother, my wife of 9 years, died at the hands of a drunk driver leaving just he and I to make it through. Tim had a deeper withdrawn phase at the loss of his mother which seemed to separate him from the world. In March of 2006 I got him a computer game AFTER reading about Glider. I could set him up and run his character and Tim would run around hacking and slaying with the best of them. Tim having very limited motor skills was fine in the AH as he could take his time. That monster however wouldn't have the patience of the Auction Masters. Glider fixed that.

I saw a new light in Tim's eyes! He would run in and attack mobs by hitting the "Kill One" button. He was able to be whole again. This made a complete difference in his disposition right from the very first day. The day he turned 60 on his 4th character, and when BC came out, getting them all 4 to 70 where as exciting as any birthday he had. He ran BGs using Glider, something he could not have done on his own but made possible because of the Glider crew.

Last month, Tim died. He suffers no more, and I have promised to keep his heroes running in the BGs. I walk past the PC and there he is, charging into battle. I can still see him sitting there and smiling from ear to ear looking up at me. If Tim gets banned, I'll run up a new one and he will run on. Someday I may shut it down and let it go. But for now, I just miss him…

So, why post this?
This is a huge Thank you to all of those that contributed so many glides to these forums. To those that made custom classes, and add on applications like Spartacus. To those who put together profile packs and posted them. To all of you who contributed in so many ways… Thank you for making these last few years of Tim's life one of a hero in the World of Warcraft.

There are some interesting points in both cases. Of course, my bias is in favour of MDY and I wish you good luck.

For me, I picked up Glider for one simple reason - I don't have the interest to level a character any more. I have played the game since beta, I have hand leveled many classes and races, I'm known in many circles as a pro at many different classes, and of course, having spent nearly three years grinding away - I have burnt out.

My partner plays too, although she levels at a far slower pace. Of course, she knows I bot, but she does not. Why? Because she has not burnt out. It takes her such a long period of time to level, that whereas I have 14+ end game hand leveled characters, she has 2.

I don't use Glider to farm, mess up the economy or cause a nuisance to people. Sure, I will try public glides every now and then, but most of my glides are hand created and in spots that no one else uses - in some cases, not even regular players because "it's too boring there!"

I don't use Glider for battlegrounds, because PvP is one of the few remaining enjoyable activities in the game. I don't report botters, because I believe in respect, but I do report gold spammers, exploiters etc. If my morals are wrong - let God be my judge, not Blizzard.

Without a doubt, it is a fact that if I had not looked into the world of Glider, I would have quit playing the game more than a year ago. Therefore, with multiple accounts, Blizzard have actually gained more money from me than they would have under their own terms.

Their change to the XP of 20-60 has gone some way to improve the game for us "hardcore," folk. But it is not enough. It is like scratching the tip of an iceberg. If Blizzard truely wanted to eliminate bots of all forms from the game they would not be claiming against one company, they would be resolving long standing issues with their game. For example:
1. Allow people to buy characters at level 40. It worked for Ultima Online.
2. Remove the 'Elite' tag from many more 20-60 mobs, eg. Winterspring.
3. Improve more Azeroth instances - so people have a reason to re-experience them.
4. Add hundreds (not tens,) more quests to the 20-60 bracket and two or three new towns.
5. Merge poorly populated realms, split or force migrate excessively large realms.
6. Create a level 20 - 40 raiding instance. In the same manner as end game.

These things would re-ignite peoples passion and enjoyment. Unfortunately, Blizzard never listen to their customers when positive suggestions for improvement are put forward. Eliminating bots will not resolve these issues. It is such an incredible bore to level at the moment once you have done it 14+ times by hand.

I have asked several friends, "why aren't you interested in wow?" The responses are interesting, ranging from, "I tried, but it's boring to level and I don't have the time," through to, "I got to level 40 and then it became such a grind I lost interest."

These people stopped paying. Blizzard lost money due to their own failures. If those players had been given Glider as an option - Blizzard would have continued to make money. It is illogical Started to get more work at school etc. I quit for about 1 year and i heard about glider. I tested it, and it was so great i bought it and instantly made a char to bot. It took a while to get the hang of it, im still learning, but its going great. Im gonn level a mage after i finish my rogue to 70. THANKS MERC AND EVERYONE TO HELPED!!!

I'd say 90% of people using glider, started using it after feeling SO bored with the game they canceled.

Glider is the ONLY reason I still play the game, I even play it legit atm. But I know that when the game starts to get stale again, I can always turn to glider to help push thru a few of the boring ass lvls that make most sane people want to quit.

We all know blizz could shut down glider if they REALLY wanted to, but I dont believe gliders are near as much of a threat to the community as some people are lead to believe. Most of us are just trying to get to 60 to catch up and play with our friends, we arent Radaring or Duping or Speed hacking, we just want to play the game where its the most exciting: level 60. Sure some of us get banned, but I think its more of a "well, this guy has been ticking off other customers, I guess we better do something about it" kind of situation.

Course I maybe full of shit, but over the span of about a years worth of botting, this is what I'm lead to believe with glider. We just arent at the center of attention, and I'm glad Merc hasnt gotten greedy enough to make us that way [|)]

Well, if I can't bot my warlock to level 55 at the very least, I wont be playing WoW anymore. I simple don't have the time to satify timesink mmorpgs (basically all mmorpgs). So, they can what they like, but with out glider, I would have quit WoW 2 weeks ago.

Quote

therefore to witch hunt and demonise something that generates revenue for you.

The game will eventually die, as it is just a game. There are many rivals out, in the works, on paper, etc. Perhaps it will take a long time, but there will be a wow killer and it will be killed. Blizzard however can prolong the life of wow simply by ceasing their witch hunt and starting their re-development of the old content.

Finally, two interesting and amusing points, one from each side:
MDY point out that Glider can help those suffering from disabilities play. This is very true, very respectable - even if it was put in as an after thought - and something that Blizzard do very little / nothing to improve themselves.

Blizzard claim that the average player (10 million+ subscribers,) plays for 2 hours a day. I find this difficult to believe. That said, most people who own 2 accounts will not be logged into both for the same length of time, so perhaps it is true when you average time out over 10 million accounts. I am sure however that if they averaged the time over actual play time it would equate to 4 or 5 hours per day, with many higher.

Good luck to all at MDY and remember to shred your PayPal receipts. ;-)

Without Glider I wouldn't play wow, I play personally but I just don't have the time to level chars to 70 like I used to.

Glider just means I can play wow with my friends in my spare time without spending months of time I won't enjoy playing through content I've already experienced to get to the same place my friends are at.

I want to play wow casually at the same level as my friends, if Blizzard won't give me that oppurtunity I'll use Glider to do it

Glider is the only reason mine, and atleast 5 people i know,'s WoW Accounts are stilla active.

I've made 2 lvl 70s by hand, and both where hit by the big bad nerfstick just a few weeks after i hit 70.

I can't deny that im a bit above 2h a day in my avarage daily playtime during these periods, but still, it was a long way to 70.

But lets pretend that the avarage playtime would be 2 hours a day:
I spend 7 months leveling my tanking character, but ooooooh noooo.. I'm on a realm with freaking 40% of the realm being tanks.

Oh wait! I can always respec... So i'll go Fury/Feral... Woho... I cant get a group/guild.

So i reroll, another 5 months goes by and i finally hit 70 with my healer...
But oh noes!...Its been 12 months..So theres a new expansion out*... So i have to get to 80...
And what do i see... Everyone has rerolled Belf paladin healers.....

I hope you all see where i'm going with this... I can type no further.

End-game got me addicted to the game. I hated it while I was leveling.

If it wasn't for botting I would of quit long before I had been able to reach end-game content.

Well, if i came to this game now...

I wouldnt play it, All my buddies are already lvl 70..
And no freaking way that i would spend months of playing on that one character all the time just to be able to play with them.

The thought is just ridicilous, I'm seriously asking myself that question everytime i go outside and play in the sunshine while by character gaines a level or 3.

Blizzard should just face it... Noone wants to play the Pre-TBC part anymore, They could just remove it completly... Or make it possible to reach level 60 in a day or 2 of /played.

The game doesnt start untill outland anyhow.

To all those against glider

Hello all

I see a lot of hatred against this tool and I simply couldn't help starting this thread even though I'm not the type that spends time posting.

WoW is or better say COULD BE a great game if all the idiotic grinding didn't ruin it, and those that say grinding is good, must be some lifeless kids with no future in real life, and I sincerely hope for their sake they'll wake up one day and see the big picture behind this game. That would probably be the time they will join the glider comunity.

I'll start off saying that I have played WoW for almost a year fair and square.
I have leveled my char from 1 to 70, geared him up all epics, maxed out professions, bought him epic flying mount without any bots so I know exactly what it takes to get there. It was painfull at times (and I must say it was sick) but I really enjoyed the end game instances and raids and still do.

Having said that, if I would have to go through all that again leveling a new toon, I would rather close my account and find better things to do than spending countless hours in front of the screen killing the same mob over and over again, and I'm sure that's how anybody with a bit of brain feels about it as well. First time might be ok but second time is the most boring thing you can spend your life on. And I do have a life, work and family to take care of as well.

So Blizzard instead of fighting against Glider and it's creators, should support them because THEY KEEP PEOPLE PAYING Blizzard's bills since Blizzard can't see through all that greed and make the game exciting. For all of you being ok with all that grinding I'll let you know that it's not designed to give you more satisfaction achieving goals but to keep you paying the bills for as long as possible. Surprised? Do you really think Blizzard gives a rat about your satisfaction. It's all business to them. It's all about money and I understand that. I work in the business and I know how it works.

Bottom line, if Glider didn't exist, Blizzard wouldn't be cashing on me anymore so a BIG THANKS to the team behind this tool and Blizzard should be thanking them too because if Glider goes down I bet 25% of their income will stop. Everybody I know feels exactly the same about this game. Some have already stopped because they got sick of grinding and didn't want to bother trying it with Glider.

What glider does, it gives you your life back and the posibility of still enjoying the endgame without going through all that idiotic waste of time grinding. So I don't see it as a cheat, or hack or anything like that and if me using it breaks the EULA so be it. If Blizzard doesn't like it they can just ban me, I couldn't care less. It will be their loss not mine. I will just have more time to spend on my life.
I don't use glider to make money, just to bypass the boring part of WoW.

Regards to all including Blizzard
Merc! I will always be grateful to you! You saved my life and marriage. (jk. or maybe not)

I notice alot of people say they were about ready to quit and glider is really the only thing that keeps them playing. Same here. WoW is too tedious, even when I'm doing the fun things (raiding/pvp) for me to have to grind cash for repairs and items. If I get caught, I get caught, and close a chapter on my life. No biggie.

A few months ago after my old raiding guild finally disbanded after over 18 months of MC/BWL/Naxx I thought i was done with the game. I have seen most of the quests. I manually took up 4 60s doing quests. I know the quests inside and out for the most part. I decided I didn't want to play on my server anymore. I wanted to pvp my my servers queues were around 30 minutes for WSG, 45 for AB, and 1.1 hours for AV. Being someone who hates wasting time, I rerolled on a server with better balance. I had no desire to level to 60 again though to pvp with the same class as my original main. I love AV. I got my rerolled to lvl 25 manually before I decided "screw this game" and cancelled my description. I decided then to see what botting was about. Did a search and found wowglider. I spent the money and decided to try it. Timidly at first, never afk trying to learn the program. Since then I've gotten more brazen with mostly AFK glides. To me, it's more exciting to glide then play. The risk of being caught is just so much fun. I glide when I can't play. When I can I do some quests, instances, and pvp (basically the fun parts of the game).

I also used glider to level up classes that I couldn't stand to manually level but want to play at lvl 60 (Pally and Shammy namely).

But like you, I have a "screw it" attitude now. If I get caught. I'm done with the game. Either way, my motto is "Glider gave me my life back!"

Glider has saved my WoW playing. Between my old lady, fulltime work, and school. If it wasnt for Glider then I wouldnt even play WoW. It is sad enough that I might actually only play WoW manually approx 5 hours a week. The rest of the time its all about the bot.

So far since getting glider I have 60 Mage
60 Rogue
50 lock
49 Hunter
21 Warrior
22 Priest
27 Priest

Only Glide them with rested XP. This is just on my PvP server. I really just wish my old lady would leave me alone some days so I could play.

On the seriously though... At first my wife mentioned how she didn't support glider and it was wrong so on and so forth. Then when I had more and more free time to spend with her she ihas been onboard/in full support of Glider. TBC has to much rep grinding to worry about stocking up on pots/mats/enchants for raiding.

Yah Im an addict.

It would be a big blow to blizzard as well. There are people out there like me who can't really enjoy WoW without gliding, because I work 12 hour shifts and it would be hard to get to level 30 within a month. I FULLY credit glider with my mage making it past 60 and into outlands. I wouldn't have even purchased TBC if it wasn't for glider.

If something happens and glider must be shut down (which I don't think that would happen), I will be forced to stop playing WoW for good.

Hey everyone.

I wanted to put this post in general because i want people who are still debating/deciding on the purchase of legit glider to read this.

I can not get over how much this program has basically saved my life...not my life as in a life or death situation, but my life as in, what i do outside of World of Warcraft. Just like many of you, I'm a 21 year old male, i live with my girlfriend, i work full time, and make decent money. but deep down inside i'm a nerd gamer =P...but thats only on the inside!! Before deciding to spend the 25 bones on this program i would waste away spending most of my free time infront of the computer painfully grinding out lvl after lvl on different toons...this was my first MMO...so as all of you have probably exsperienced...i fell face first into a life consuming addiction, World of Warcraft. Before glider it was hard to keep the woman happy and entertained, and the friends from thinking i went derranged hermit on them while maintaining an elite online status...if your a nerd, even if only on the inside, you cant deny that this is important!...But now with glider, i spend alot more of my freetime out with the amigos, or at home with the lady. It has deffinately improved our relationship, because now shes not bitching at me "Omg, your still playng that fucking game??!! its 5 in the morning! get your ass in bed!" yeah, no more of that...sleep schedule has returned to normal.I mean lets face it, for those of us that have girlfriends....you know it damn near takes all we got to keep them happy and fill our gaming addiction. Not any longer. With glider I maintain my elite uber status, and i lvl faster than anyone not botting. my toons are "self twinking" because all the greens that i would buy to lvl....i usually wake up with in my bags. And i've always got the gold for the BOE blues.

to my next point, i make decent money. no i'm not a billionair/millionair, but i make enough that when in desperate need, ordering a little gold online isnt going to keep me from eating for two weeks, or going out and entertaining myself/girlfriend. well, not anymore. with glider I make an average of 1500 gold a week...and thats low compared to alot of botters. but thats just basic gliding, nothing special.....so for 25 bones....i never need to buy gold again...that was the selling point for me with this program, i was already 60.

Just recently I started lvling a priest with glider....having wonderfull lvl gaines already..its a brand new server, when i made my guy and joined a guild, i was the lowest lvl guildy. well, its been 3 nights, and now i'm the highest lvl guildy, lol... and i'm closely catching up to the highest lvl player on the server =).....for those of you who thrive for end game...imagine having one of the first 60 healers, or tanks on a server....thats the fastest way to reserve a spot in an endgame guild...be raiding with them from day one.

to sum it all up...thanks WoW Glider, you have made it all so painless for me. and thanks to the programers, i'm now back to getting laid atleast 5 out of 7 nights a week...it was at 1 or 2 before glider =(.

ps. to the kid that came in thrashing everyone for botting, hoping everyone got banned and saying how we're such bad people because we cheat...yeah you, dont know if your still trolling this site...but just incase, imma go ahead and give you a few lines to read.

If only you knew the things in life...yes, that place outside of gameland, that place with real people/places/things, that really matter.... if only you knew the things you were missing out on, because you were glued to your computer during any free time you had. My heart goes out to you young man, i fear you may die a virgin.

Loose Weight With WoWGlider

I personally lost weight with wow glider. About 10lbs now. I get to watch my shows work on my bowflex and go out of my room. All thanks to WoWGlider. I regained my life working out more watching WoWGlider Play my Character for me. Gotta love it.

Actually I think he's serious, and it's actually a legitimate point.

Now that I have glider I'm able to actually be productive with my life outside of work. I'm taking classes again (advancing my career) and just joined a gym...

I believe him. I know my work schedule made it rough to play WoW because the only times I could was at night, but I like to wake up and go to the gym in the morning everyother day, meaning I could only pay WoW everyother day. Im hoping with WoWglider tweaked the right way I will have the time for everything like gym, work, my gf, and now WoW!!

Pretty cool... and I know what you said may sounds funny to some but I know exactly what you mean. I never glide AFK anymore and most of my exercise comes from home weight system and a a nice treadmill facing a big screen TV. I have my laptop off to the side gliding away on my character where I can see it and hear any alarms.

Glider makes it nice because I play the fun parts of the game, quests, instances, PvP... and leave to the boring stuff like grinding, resource gathering, and gold farming to the automation.

Glider has allowed me to work and level at the same time.

However not for lifting weights agian. I'm workin' at UPS to save for college and let me tell you, it's a workout. 400+ packages per hour, hot as hell or cold as winter (what ever temp it is, it will always be 25 degrees hotter or colder) and average box weiggt is 55 pounds. I sweat my weight's worth, my shirt is soaked in 30 minutes!

In any case, Glider helps us all in some way

I have done the grind/quest to 60 manual before. it was cool, but I do not want to do it again. Glider lets me grind to 60 at which point I stop gliding that toon and start a new one.

I just finished a Shaman on a PvP server (3rd 60 toon) that i really enjoy. So my alt mage that I am glide I am not in any rush. I will glide an area. when I need to move I will log for a day or two on that toon cause I am to lazy to run to the new place.

So the answer is I glide to play.

I have played up to late lvl 40's before and I had a blast. I love questing and exploring the world inside. OMW started using glider before me, and that was last year. He had been trying to get me to try it, and thats when he got hit in the Sept ban wave. I started using glider shortly after that ban wave. OMW and I worked together to learn how to use the program correctly and safely. Since using glider, we have been able to do more things outside of the game. Its alot easier to hit glide and get lvls then it is to sit in front of the computer for hours on end. We have 2 children, and we have started to teach our oldest how to use glider. He really enjoys sitting and watching his toon kill stuff, LOL.

I glide to catch up with my friends level wise and farm for cash. I usually spend my time at my desk while it is "working" to read books. I am currently working on a degree and trying to get my microsoft certs. Thanks to glider I have had time to study for and pass my first one, Windows XP Pro. Now I am half way through a book on Server and completely up to date on my reading for my current classes.

I have to say, That Glider saved my life.
I have botted for about 2 weeks, first trying out the demo and loving it for the 2 mins.

My relationship with my girlfriend was starting to go to shit. I would spend so much time simply farming to make a couple gold and days trying to lvl. I have time to start working out,(getting sexy) I watch about 5 movies a week with her now. Go out to eat and to the club all the time.

When I started playing wow it was like a virus and it suck me in. Now I have Glider, I spend about 2 hours a day instead of 8 hours a day playing wow. I set up my way points and do some LW-skilling and hit the glider button and walk away, for 2 hours come back, vendor stuff and hit glide.. I love Glider. and its no lie that it really saved my life. (Blizzard Your game is a addictive drug that costs 15$ a month)

I'll quote myself:

> Quote:
> > Quote:
> > b) Lost Subscription Revenue
> > WoW players pay Blizzard around a $15 monthly subscription fee. (SOF ¶ 254). As detailed in Blizzard's expert report, by automating their characters' progress through the WoW "leveling" process, Glider users compress the time period required to reach the higher levels of WoW. (SOF ¶ 255-56). A study of WoW play estimated that an average user needs approximately 480 hours of play to reach the maximum character level. Whereas a typical human player averaging two hours a day would thus need eight months to reach the highest level, a Glider user can run the bot and achieve the same level in less than one month. (SOF ¶ 257-59). Thus, Glider users can "skip ahead" to the advanced levels without having to pay the additional seven months of subscription fees required of a legitimate human player.
> What kind of bullshit is that? Glider has increased the revenue of Blizzard I'm sure, from me (I'm not extreme) they've earned 2 or 3 extra accounts, plus 1 extra year of subscribtion. How can they claim someone who uses glider pays less to Blizzard? We're the only ones who really has multiple accounts, and we keep playing, something I wouldn't have done without it.

New beta version of DanPriest! Pretty stable too:

3 accounts total for 5 months.

Purchase of 2 accounts, plus 1 BC copy.

$15 monthly for 3 accounts for 5 months = $45 x 5 = $225
1 copy of BC = $20
2 copies of WoW = $36

Total revenue they would have lost if not for Glider from me directly = $281

Im in a different position, I got glider around level 30 after starting to play many characters over the years and getting bored with the game at around the 25-30 level mark. The main reason I stopped playing was due to the grind getting the next set of skills and not having the motivation.

When I found out about glider I went back to playing WoW and have since continued to play. I only glided my character for around 5 levels, but it was enough to get my motivation back and I have not used the tool since as I do not want to loose my account.

I have since played wow for the a year further and purchased TBC expansion.

Thanks for my wife

I can't begin to explain how much time wowglider has saved me in the real world, so much that I found my social life leading myself to a very special lady.

I started gliding way back about 2 years ago, when glider was like 10 bucks and there wasn't those fancy shmancy features. (I know my profile doesn't say I started 2 years ago, but this isn't my first account :P here at mmoglider.com)

So I'm gonna make this short and sweet, without glider I would have been at home playing by hand all day because yes World of Warcraft IS that addicting and glider IS my anti-drug (for me anyway), so now that I had so much time on my hand, a social life began meeting a very nice (and sexy) looking girl :P

It's been our 1 1/2 year anniversary this month on the 24th and I believe wowglider played a HUGE part in this success.

I'm proposing to her on her birthday on the 9th of Feb, everything is so great I'm 110% sure it'll be a yes

THank you so much Merc =]

WoW GLIDER SAVED MY LIFE !!

In order to play wow 24/7 I quit my job and started smoking crack.. I just couldn't get enough I wanted 1 of ever char alli and horde at level 60. I had stopped eating and drinking unless someone brought it to me. I hadn't taken a shower in Over 3 months. The was a pile of cans next to my desk 5 feet tall. All around my desk was dirty plates and cups.. there where nats and flys everywhere.

I friend told me I needed help, but I was like no look at me, I got 60 pally who's like fucking indestructible nothing can stop him before I can get away, I own, Now look I'm a 60 hunter look at my crits omg like dps bitch I own. Just wait until I level my mage to 60 I'm do fireball for 7k dmg I'm going to 1 hit kill feral druid flag carriers in wsg omg pwnz0r.. Then I'm going to make a 60 lock and like fear and kill people before the fear run out with my uber shadow bolt thing omgz pwnz0r...

two months later I couldn't stand to do one more quest or kill one more mob, I had also lost 30 lbs and I think I had at least a couple of small heart attacks from smoking to much crack.. Then I hear about someone botting in barrens chat so I log off wow and start looking.

Thanks to wow glider
1. I'm taken showers everyday now
2. I've stopped smoking crack
3. I've started sleeping again
4. I've cleaned my room
5. I got a new job
6. I got a 60 mage that pwnz0rs
7. I got a 60 lock that fears alli to death
8. I haven't done a quest since I downloaded wow Glider
9. I've regained that 30 pounds back and look normal again

Thanks WoW Glide you saved my ass ...

plus now if i get banned for botting I'm going to sue blizzard for trying to kill me and get a but load of cash !

WOW GLIDER PWNZ0RS !!!

Thanks merc you SAVED MY ASS !!... ... I go outside again !!!

Many Thanks

Just wanted to thank you for glider.

I love playing endgame wow. Whether its pvping in a guild/voicechat battleground group, or taking down raid mobs, or just getting buck naked and running around pimp slapping lowbies with my bare hands.

Problem is the server my origial 60 is on is terrible. The horde generally have piss poor attitudes, and my old guild disbanded and everyone either quit wow or moved servers without telling anyone.

So I traded my account and met a great group of people, and we moved servers and started up a new crew. As usual I wondered how the new crop of people on a server manage to level so fast, and nonstop. Anyways the asshat took his account back 2 weeks into the new server and i lost my hard work (my playtime is limited by a real job and taking care of my family) and contemplated quitting wow for good, instead of starting over.

After finding glider, its at least given me new reason to keep my subscription to wow going. Instead of wasting away precious time releveling and getting less down around the house, now i get my levels and the laundry done at the same time.

Hats off to you, and thanks for the contribution to the community.

No he said from an economist's standpoint, not that he was one in previous post. Geez, maybe he took a class or two in college.

Anyway raine, I felt the same way about WoW, and glider. Glider resparked my interest in WoW.

I''m impressed with all the hard work that went into what glider is, and is becoming. Impressed of the community around it.

Glider is a HUGE success!

I just wanted to drop a quick note to the developers of glider in regards to how successful it has been for me.
I have been playing this game since it was released over a year ago. Since that time, I've personally level'ed 5 toons to 60 and many others to 30+. All of these characters were leveled with many hours of my own time. The first 3 toons were on a pve server and I decided that I didn't like the carebear-ness of it so I sold that account and started one on a pvp server. The next 2 characters were also personally level'ed to 60 and it was after that time, that I discovered the wonderful thing that is the WoWGlider. As I'm sure most of you can imagine, after 5 lvl 60s, I was sick of the same old grind over and over and...well, you get the idea.
I started gliding about a month ago, and since that time, I've gotten my warrior from 47 to 60 and my shaman from 56 to 60. In the last 2 weeks alone, I have made over 1500 gold from the money/cloth/greens(disenchanted)/blues and epics(Krol blade, glowing brightwood staff, freezing band, gloves of holy might) that have dropped for me. WoWGlider has reenergized my love for the World of Warcraft game!

Thank you again for an amazing program!

I am extremely pleased!

I am extremely pleased with Glider! I cannot praise it enough, in all honesty. I won't lie...it can be tricky to set up...and there are many things I have yet to master regarding it's use. BUT...this tool is allowing me to easily pass through the boring levels I have done many tmes already to get new characters up there into a range that I can play with my friends.

I now have it set up to multi-glide (only took two tries and one complete reinstall of glider. haha) I am really excited about trying out ppather, but it seems like it's rather complicated, so I will need to read up on it.

And BTW, for anyone curious about the value of subscribing to elite...the "oober" classes are awesome! I am especially loving the ooberpaladin class!

And the guides! While there are some guides that aren't very valuable there are others that you really just shouldn't run the program without reading. It's sick!

Finally, I just wanna say that not all people who wish to bot are gold sellers or account sellers...I know this first hand! I myself don't want to make money playing wow...I just want to skip the redundant and boring parts of the game I have seen too many times to count so I can get to some new content with new classes I have yet to try.

To the glider community, thanks! To those thinking about the value...it's worth it! It really is!
